REFUGEES CROWD
FRENCH CITIES

Government Now Caring For Nearly a Million Persons.

LIVE ON 25 CENTS A DAY.

Included Among These Are 143,000 Belgians and 11,000 Servians—Others Come From Fortified French Cities Near Battle Lines—Some Earn Own Living.

Nearly a million people, the exact figures being 928,000, who have been driven from their homes are scattered throughout France and draw allowances from the government, half the number being under sixteen years of age. The greatest number, 702,000, are French, refugees from the invaded departments, from the fortified towns which could no longer keep "useless mouths" and from the danger zone of the front. The Belgians number 143,000; Alsace and Lorraine have sent 12,000 and Servia 11,000.

In addition to these refugees who need state aid, there are about 120,000 who have means of their own, but these decrease as their means become exhausted.

The first class of refugees to be aided was the "useless mouths" from fortresses like Maubeuge, Verdun, Toul, Epinal and Belfort. Before the war had lasted a fortnight 25,000 of these had to be provided with homes elsewhere.

After the battle of Charleroi and the rapid onrush of the Germans 115,000 Belgians and French had to be sent to the rear, and when Paris was threatened with an attack early in September 15,000 who had built homes within the zone of the capital's fortifications had to be moved.

Live With Private Families.
Refugees were first installed in empty buildings, schoolhouses, etc., but it was soon found that some regular principle must be adopted, and every family not touched by the war was called upon to receive a refugee family, the state paying the expenses.

The battle of the Marne slackened the inflow of refugees for a time, but when operations moved to the north the number became so great that they had to be moved not only by train, but by ships, which carried them from Dunkirk, Calais and Boulogne to La Pallice, whence they were distributed among the southwest departments. Many families who had been taken to Germany in the invaded districts were returned via Switzerland and had to be provided for.

The money aid given to refugees has been fixed at the same rate as the allowance made to the wives and families of mobilized soldiers, 25 cents a day for each adult and 10 cents for each child under sixteen.

When refugees had settled down and could earn something by their labor a difficult question had to be solved. It would manifestly be unfair to suppress the grant of a poor woman who could only earn, say, 25 cents a day, and yet those who could earn a living wage (and it must be remembered that the war had caused a great demand for labor) could not expect to receive a grant in addition. The question was left to the prefect of the department to decide with the aid of three members of a committee formed to distribute aid in kind the gifts of private individuals, benevolent societies, etc. No hard and fast rules were laid down, but any refugee who without valid excuse refused any offer of work which was properly paid and suited his or her capacities had the allowance suppressed.

Many refugees have found well paid work in munition factories and have thus been able to maintain themselves and co-operate directly toward their return to their old homes.

SON'S DEATH LIKE GRANT'S

Former President's Smoking Habit Taken Up by Younger Man.

The real cause of the death of General Frederick D. Grant on April 1, 1915, was made public for the first time the other day. He died of cancer of the throat superinduced by the excessive use of tobacco. His father, General U. S. Grant, died from the same cause, and the malignant growth was attributed to the same agency. The facts regarding the death of the younger Grant are contained in the following paragraph from an article by Dr. Robert Abbe of New York, senior surgeon to St. Luke's hospital, who was with him when he died, on "The Legacy of the Intemperate Use of Tobacco," which appeared in the Medical Record:

"I could not help reminding him (a patient) that one of our great national heroes smoked incessantly, as every one knew, and suffered and died from the consequences of disease of his throat. His distinguished son, also a heroic figure in our army, adopted the same habit, smoked equally incessantly and suffered and died of the same terrible consequences. This is a heavy price to pay for the intemperate indulgence of such a throat irritating and unnatural habit."

Non-Habits: Torture; Case Gray. Oklahoma has been very busy trying to keep track of bunch of cattle he said from eggs put under her as a joke, and when master saw them he left the neighborhood.

MADEMOISELLE JACQUELINE'S
ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

Mademoiselle Jacqueline will each Sunday give advice in this column pertinent to love affairs, and any letters addressed to Mdlle. Jacqueline care The Intelligencer will be given attention by her and answered in the next week's issue.

An Urgent Lover.

Dear Mlle. Jacqueline,
I am only a college girl, but I am very much in love with a young man and he wants me to marry him without finishing my college course. What do you advise?

Hardly Loves You.

My Dear Girl:
I can't believe that this man really loves you! I'm afraid he has mistaken your attraction for him, and it after all it's not love, but passion! Passion and love are so very much alike that it is hard to distinguish between the two. If that man really loves you, he would be willing to wait, but he is afraid to wait because his desire or passion for you may not last. Dear, take my advice and do not marry him!

Question of Congeniality.

Dear Jacqueline:
I am in love with a young man, three years my senior, and we are engaged to be married soon. He is a very literary man, and I'm afraid, since I have a limited education, that we may not be congenial after we have been married some time. Please advise me at once, as I am very much in love and he insists that we be married soon.

A Level Head.

Dear Ella:
I think you are very wise and level-headed to think of such things when you are so very much in love. A wife should always try to be in sympathy with her husband—he expects it. Men do not realize it, but they are very selfish. They want their wit to be appreciated and they also want to be sympathized with in failure.

Going to school does not necessarily educate one; that comes from good thoughts and from the good literature one assimilates. You should get busy at once reading some sound things and after you are married you should try to keep in touch with your husbands work.

"Jacqueline."

Question of Finances.

Dear Jacqueline:
I want your advice on a question that has been on my mind for months: I cannot come to a decision. I am very much in love and am in love with a young man who is not wealthy, but who has a fine profession and enough saved for us to begin life comfortably. My father objects to the marriage, on account of the financial condition of the aforesaid; but as I care nothing for wealth, and love this young man dearly, I want to marry him. Father has said he would disown me. I care nothing for his wealth, but I should hate to go against his wishes. He wants me to wait until this young man has made as great a fortune as he has. Please advise me!

Disinterestedly,

Marion.

Mary Elm.

My Dear:
I think you hold a very sensible view of life—it certainly does not consist in the abundance of wealth. Most fathers are very foolish when it comes the marriage of their daughters. He thinks that of course, no man is good enough for her. But, he will let the man have her who can give her everything she wants, and as a result she is not happy. Your father thinks he has insured her happiness.
